Project Overview

Baltimore Peninsula seeks to be America’s first purpose-driven impact community - a new category of urban development and community anchored in equity and opportunity.

This transformational development opportunity has the scale and ambition to lift Baltimore and create a model for urban redevelopment.

Baltimore Peninsula is a public/private partnership of historic significance. “Chapter One” is 1.1m square feet of development, consisting of five eight story structures; two Class A office buildings, Roost extended stay hotel & apartments, Rye House luxury residential and 250 Mission residential and structured parking deck.

Chapter One is the first phase of what will eventually be over 13m square feet of commercial and residential development.

Neighboring uses include: Under Armour World Headquarters + 25,000 square foot retail brand house, NCAA track and turf field and grandstand and supporting adjacent office and R&D, two marinas with approximately 200 slips, Volo Sports, Rye Street Tavern (Clyde’s restaurant group), Sagamore Distillery, Nick’s Fish House and Locke Landing, an 800 unit apartment and garage townhome community delivering starting 2024.

TOWNHOME SALES AT FORMER LOCKE INSULATORS SITE TOP 100

August 19, 2024 - The Baltimore Business Journal

Over 100 homes have sold at the emerging Locke Landing development in Port Covington as the city's residential market shows a bump in activity despite high mortgage rates.

The benchmark is being lauded as a bright spot in the city's housing market that has produced few new construction projects over the past decade as luxury apartment construction has dominated Baltimore's residential growth.

It is also another signal that the transformation of the peninsula south of Federal Hill is starting to move forward at a faster pace.

The development on the former Locke Insulators site on the Middle Branch is expected to bring 1,300 new residents to the southern rim of Port Covington and sits next to the $5.5 billion Baltimore Peninsula project, a separate development.

Locke Landing is being developed by Mark Sapperstein's 28 Walker and kicked off last year with plans for 390 townhomes, 420 luxury apartment units and a 600-car garage to be constructed by late next year. A clubhouse and swimming pool are expected to break ground next month, Sapperstein said.

"It feels good," Sapperstein said, of the up-and-coming vibe at the site. "It has great surroundings and the right mix. We'll soon have 1,300 new residents living there."

Workers are busy this summer adding to the growing townhome segment of the 25-acre site that once held the hulking Locke Insulators industrial plant, he said. National firms DRB Group and K. Hovnanian Homes are building two and three-story upscale townhouses and the first wave of residents has already moved in. Developer Greystar is building the apartment towers that broke ground earlier this year.

List prices at Locke Landing start in the $500,000s but some are going for as high as $750,000, Sapperstein said. That's well above the original price of $530,000, a benchmark that had already jumped to close to $543,000 in March based on buyer demand, Brandon Gurney, a regional division president for DRB, told the Baltimore Business Journal earlier this year. Gurney was unavailable for comment on the project's progress since then.

With a steady stream of tours given to potential new homeowners this year and 110 townhomes already closed, Sapperstein said the project is serving as another step in the transformation of the waterfront into a modern mixed-use development.

The final segment of the townhomes will sit on the waterfront near a promenade and are expected to fetch higher prices — and fast sales, according to Sapperstein. Other amenities also abound.

Locke Landing is next door to Nick's Fish House, the popular seafood restaurant that soon will boast a redeveloped 150-slip marina abutting its outdoor crab deck.

With Baltimore Peninsula's massive overhaul by Under Armour CEO Kevin Plank's Sagamore Ventures and MAG Partners, the area this summer is a beehive of activity that also includes the development of a 280,000-square-foot Under Armour corporate headquarters expected to open by December.

Across Hanover Street, workers have broken ground on the sweeping redevelopment of the barren land called Westport. They are focused on infrastructure this summer and the beginnings of a new waterfront park this year, said Ray Jackson, principal at Stonewall Capital, developer of Westport.

And more new homes are on the way at the 43-acre site, too, Jackson added.

"We will have them under construction before year's end," he said.
